

POLICE STANDING PAT ON GIBLIN ASSAULT

Five days have elapsed since Patrolman Edward W. Sprague of the East Boston police station witnessed the assault on James H. Maguire by Thomas Giblin, allowing him to disappear without making an arrest. Police Commissioner O'Meara has not asked for an investigation yet.

Patrolman John A. Brickley has not preferred charges against Sprague for an apparent neglect of duty of the department since the assault.

One of the most important rules of the police department and one which Commissioner O'Meara has printed on each roster card sent to the different stations says:

The first purpose of an efficient police policeman is to prevent crime. The second is to detect and apprehend offenders if crime is committed. To these ends all the efforts of the police must be directed. The protection of life and property, the preservation of public tranquility and the absence of crime will follow as a result of the first two.

When Mr. Giblin assaulted Officer Sprague, he committed a crime. When Officer Sprague failed to arrest him, he committed a crime. It was his duty to arrest him. The fact that he did not do so is a crime. The fact that he did not do so is a crime. The fact that he did not do so is a crime.

What did Patrolman Sprague do for the protection of life and property? NOTHING. What did Patrolman Sprague do for the preservation of public tranquility? NOTHING. What did Patrolman Sprague do to prevent crime? NOTHING.

DIPLMATIC BREAK WITH MEXICO MAY BE COMPLETE IN FIVE HOURS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—Mexican relations between the United States and Mexico are so near the breaking point that arrangements are being made for the departure of Ambassador D'Aquila from Mexico City today.

When the American embassy is closed its affairs will be turned over to the Norwegian consulate. It was at first supposed that Admiral Von Hildebrand, German minister, would act as the United States representative in Mexico, but this has been abandoned.

The statement issued by the diplomatic corps here, however, leaves no further doubt that the United States is within the bounds of possibility that it will cut the American government will bring all negotiations summarily to an end.

Mr. Lind is believed to have been advised Washington to end the dictatorial rule in Mexico with a few hours. Charles O'Donoghue, secretary of the matter in Mexico, said that he expects a favorable outcome.

Reports that the United States would lift the embargo on arms for the Constitutionalists have caused a feeling akin to panic here. The belief is held that if Washington took such action there would be a reign of blood throughout Mexico in which no foreigners would be safe.

Right thousand Mexican federalists are marching on Mexico, which is held by constitutionalists. It is expected there will be forty-eight hours. The government has been asked to give no quarter because of the massacre of federalists in Mexico was captured by insurgents.

7 DEATHS FROM BLIZZARD OF NORRIS

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The entire great lakes region and portions of the Ohio valley were ravaged today by one of the worst blizzards in the history of the section. Storm damage is reported and many points—particularly in Northern Indiana and Ohio—are cut off through the wrecking of telephone and telegraph lines.

It is estimated the total losses will reach more than a half million dollars and at least seven deaths have resulted. The blizzard is headed eastward. The Lake Shore Railroad is completely tied up. The Twentieth Century Limited, which left New York for Boston, is storm-bound.

Word from Houghton, Mich., states that a big lake liner is aground on Manitowish Island with a forty-mile wind. Hurried in snow, three Cleveland and Pittsburgh railroads had, carrying between three and four hundred passengers. In Milwaukee, the new $500,000 municipal treasurer was washed away.

Local weather forecasters said that another blizzard was forming in the Canadian Northwest, to sweep across the United States near the end of this week and will be of more proportion than the storm of today.

At Pittsburgh, Pa., one man is dead and three hundred passengers are snow-bound in a passenger train. Eighteen coaches of snow fell in Northern West Virginia.

Seven ships have been driven ashore by the gale on Lake St. Clair. Two vessels are hard ashore at West Beach.

"I like the Secretary in a silk hat," she said. "I think he must be coming to him." "Yes," said Mrs. Bryan, with a sigh, "but you know that silk hat is one of my additional burdens. The Secretary has grown so fond of it that I am always afraid he will go to sleep in it."

HUNT 6 STATES AFTER TYPICAL AMERICAN GIRL

The search for the typical American girl of New England continues. The AMERICAN has received scores of photographs of contestants from every part of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

There is still time for more entries. The prize is an all portrait squelch done by one of Boston's best known artists.

Mothers, send in the photographs of your daughters, addressing all communications to the "Typical Girl Edition," Boston AMERICAN, Boston. Young men, send the photographs of your sweethearts, always proving that you think them lovely to be typical American girls, well worthy of the prize.

The judges who have been chosen to select from the rapidly growing galaxy of girls entering have now been selected. They are Ethel Lee Maher, William Medinger Paxton and Mrs. Clavin Gates Page.

Those three well-known artists have painted many American girls. They should easily recognize the typical American girl.

The girls will be carefully compared all photographs, and after narrowing the choice down to three or four, finally one will be selected.

A letter from a Harvard student signing himself "Ethel," claims New England has no longer possessed the typical American girl. The fruits of the present search, in the opinion of many, disprove his claim that the title has gone to the light house.

The selection of those three comes here to that there seems to be a dearth of typical Americans to club vicinity. They may be here at the Yale game. If so, they are visitors to the Bostonians. They are not the only thing in the South Atlantic. The belief that we have the most beautiful and typical of American women is another of our "creeds."

Miss Frances G. Curtis of the Boston School Board said today she was in hearty sympathy with the three-cent dance, as carried on in Cleveland. The School Board has not yet taken any action on the matter.

Boston has a better scheme, according to D. Henry Sullivan, Superintendent of Boston public schools. He says the Boston plan is to put dancing into the hands of the social class and encourage it. He believes they are doing better work than a municipal dance hall could do.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—"A better piece of engineering work than that on the Panama Canal has never been done." This was the declaration of Lindley B. Secretary Garrison refused to discuss reports that he and Colonel Goethals had clashed as to the future administration of the Canal.

Have You the "Wanderlust"?

To the Traveling Public:

For the coming winter months a number of most attractive cruises have been arranged by our Company which deserve the attention of all who are planning a trip during the coming season.

The West Indies and the Panama Canal have attracted tens of thousands of Americans in search of rest, recreation and information during the last few years, and so great has this tourist demand become that our Company has decided to send the great steamer "AMERIKA," of 23,000 tons, and the superb "VICTORIA LUISE," of 16,500 tons, from New York to the AMERICAN MEDITERRANEAN this winter. There will also be four short cruises from New Orleans during the winter months by the steamers "FUERST BISMARCK" and "KRON-PRINZESSIN CECILIE." These cruises will vary from 16 DAYS to 29 DAYS IN DURATION, and the itineraries include visits to CUBA, PORTO RICO, JAMAICA, PANAMA CANAL, VENEZUELA, TRINIDAD, BARBADOS, MARTINIQUE, ST. THOMAS and NASSAU. Every comfort and convenience is provided aboard as well as ashore, and innumerable testimonials have been received by us from patrons of past trips. The lowest rates vary from $125 to $175 upward. Our illustrated descriptive booklet contains full particulars.

Another cruise worthy of your special consideration is the ORIENT-INDIA CRUISE by our steamer "Cleveland," of 17,000 tons, which leaves NEW YORK on JANUARY 15TH, 1914, calling at MADEIRA, SPAIN, ALGERIA, ITALY, GREECE, HOLY LAND, EGYPT, INDIA and CEYLON. The entire round trip voyage from New York and return to New York is made in 93 days AT $700 upward, including shore excursions and all necessary expenses. Accommodation will also be provided FROM NEW YORK TO ITALY OR EGYPT, OR FROM ITALY OR EGYPT TO INDIA AND CEYLON, if desired. These combinations of portions of the trip should also appeal to those going to ITALY OR EGYPT by earlier steamers, as they afford a rare opportunity to reach these points after a short stay in ITALY OR EGYPT. Let us know your wishes, and we will submit very attractive suggestions.

For more than twenty-five years our Company has made a careful study in planning these pleasure cruises, and, with the experienced staff at our command, they have been brought to a high standard of excellence in actual operation.

Hoping that you will favor us, we remain
Yours very truly,

SIMPLE RULES FROM DAINTY DIANE ROBERTS

Pretty Diane Roberts

By MAUDE MILLER

W e present to you the modern Diane, although in the world of every-day life she is Miss Diane Roberts, and she has a name with a "D". She is a very modern, up-to-date American girl, and yet very simple, for her beauty methods are modeled on very simple, almost severe lines.

Our Diane believes in cleanliness, not a makeshift of the real thing, but absolute cleanliness and she has very simple but decided rules for keeping clean.

"God gave us eyes for a purpose," she said, "when I looked at me a little generally. 'And as I should keep them white and very clean and bright. And how to make them bright? Here is a very simple method of my own which I have found most effective. Wash them frequently in warm milk, and you will be surprised at the result. You will feel as if you could open them wide enough. If it is just like looking through a newly washed window pane.

"And then the teeth are important. For we must have an excuse to smile. If you have bad teeth, you are sure to look like a miser. I have a little trick here. I brush the teeth with a weak solution of boracic acid, and use plain salt on them once a week. If every girl would do this there would be fewer dentist bills to pay.

the department store, but as if it had been made for you alone. Keep away from funny things, only very extreme things can affect them, anyway, and don't be extreme. If your cheeks are becoming they are sure to be 'struck'.

And now you will see why I have called Miss Roberts our Diane. She has the freedom of Diane in her movements, the charm of Diane in her laughing, the grace of Diane in her bearing, and the simplicity of Diane in her dress. If the charm of the simple girl appeals to you, you can be as Diane if you will, at least in a way. And even that is worth while.

GLEAMING FROM THE PHILISTINE.
Anybody can give fifty-seven reasons for not doing the thing he does not want to do but should do.

Dance Nature seems to consider that anything you do not utilize is not needed, and she is averse to carrying dead freight, so she says:

People who do not play their cards well work together.

A city supplies inspiration—but only from a distance. Once mix up in it and become a part of it and you are lost and subdued. People who do this live in a city have their homes in the country. The commuters are the boys, and the boys are the commuters.

IN A FRIENDLY SORT OF WAY.
When a man isn't got a cent and he's feeling kinder blue.

Oh, the clouds hang dark and heavy and won't let the sunshine through.

It's a great thing, oh, my brothers, for a fellow just to say:

His hand upon your shoulder in a friendly sort of way.

It makes a chap feel cheerful, it makes the heart drop easy.

As you feel a sort of flutter in the region of your heart:

You can't look up into his eyes, you don't know what to say.

When a hand is on your shoulder in a friendly sort of way.

Oh, the world's a curious compound, with its happy and its gall.

With one and bitter cross, but a good world after all.

As a good God must have made it; he knows that's what I say.

When a hand is on my shoulder in a friendly sort of way.

Mayor Fitzgerald Should Be Urged to Stand for Another Term

Boston Needs the Most Optimistic, Energetic, Resourceful, Experienced, Pushing Man the City Can Get in the Mayor's Office During the Coming Period of Our Commercial Revival—MAYOR FITZGERALD IS THAT MAN

The AMERICAN believes that Mayor Fitzgerald ought to be REQUESTED to stand for another term.

Boston needs the most OPTIMISTIC, ENERGETIC, RESOURCEFUL, EXPERIENCED, PUSHING MAN in the Mayor's office during the coming period of our commercial revival. There is no available man who meets these specifications EXCEPT Mr. Fitzgerald.

The selection of our next Chief Magistrate is largely a question of BUSINESS, not of SENTIMENT.

The Mayor is the business manager of the largest corporation in New England. If we were the stockholders of a private corporation called upon to select a managing director and we had before us the names of Kenny, Bangs, Smith, Kelher, Murphy and Fitzgerald from whom to select the man who should manage our corporation business, would we hesitate for a moment to choose Mayor Fitzgerald, who has had the long experience, who has a SURPASSING ENERGY, which not even his enemies deny, who is FAVORABLY KNOWN THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, who first conceived the idea that we could increase the importance of our city by deliberate work of advertising and promotion, and who proclaimed that the upbuilding of a great metropolis could be achieved by the citizens in their public capacity through the same methods that are employed to upbuild private concerns, namely by attracting business through direct solicitation and by creating conditions and facilities for the purpose of attracting business?

The idea of a "BIGGER, BETTER AND BUSIER" Boston, when first promulgated by Mayor Fitzgerald, seemed like mere catchwords. But Boston has received a great IMPULSE since that day—eight years ago.

THE ENTIRE SPIRIT OF BOSTON HAS CHANGED.

We NO LONGER PASSIVELY SUBMIT to the investment of our money in distant enterprises on the assumption that there are no profitable enterprises which could engage our capital here.

We NO LONGER SUBMIT to the stealing away of our railroads by more energetic men in other sections of the country.

We NO LONGER TAMELY SUBMIT to the diversion of business upon these railroads to other ports beyond New England.

We NO LONGER PERMIT our great harbor facilities to continue unused.

We have brought NEW STEAMSHIP LINES TO BOSTON. We have called such attention to our facilities and we have so impressed our steamship lines with our possibilities that now WE are not begging the steamship companies for more ships, but THEY are begging us for more wharves at which to dock more ships.

We are slowly but surely MAKING THE RAILROADS REALIZE that they cannot trifle with our interests, which is the first step to make them SERVE our interests.

We have CREATED THE GREATEST BUSINESS ORGANIZATION IN THE WORLD in the Chamber of Commerce.

We have the Real Estate Exchange and the Improvement Association, which are BANDS OF BUSINESS MEN who have attained a degree of independence and influence and confidence not known before in this community.

These are not ALL the achievements of Mayor Fitzgerald. BUT HE WAS IN THEM AND OF THEM. The changed spirit of our Boston times is part of his optimistic, booming energy.

If Mr. Fitzgerald represented rather than created these general results, there are many great improvements of which his administration is the undoubted author.

It is impossible to review Mayor Fitzgerald's administration here, but we may point out some of the highest peaks in it.

That part of the tax rate which provides for expenditures within the Mayor's legal control HAS BEEN REDUCED twenty-five cents. But this has not been accomplished by economies which were cruel to the employees of the city or wasteful of the city's real assets.

While our tax rate was REDUCED, yet the SALARIES OF THE CITY LABORERS WERE INCREASED from $2.25 to $2.50 per day; the firemen's and policemen's salaries were INCREASED $100 a year, and the Mayor tried also to RAISE the pay of the school teachers.

The functions of the city were not neglected. In public improvements, like playgrounds, parks, stations, $600,000; Dorchester more than $1,000,000; East Boston, almost $2,000,000; Hyde Park, $35,000; Roxbury, more than $1,250,000; South Boston, almost $1,500,000; West Roxbury, more than $250,000, and the city proper nearly $5,000,000.

The total death rate has STEADILY DECREASED during the Mayor's term.

More than any other chief magistrate he has ENCOURAGED THE USE OF OUR PARKS AND PLAYGROUNDS as real health resorts for outdoor sports and recreation.

He helped to MAKE THE CHARLES RIVER BASIN POPULAR. He ESTABLISHED automobile passenger service in Franklin Park for Saturday afternoons, Sundays and holidays, and has thus brought this splendid park WITHIN THE REACH of the people.

During his administration the Aquarium and Zoologic Gardens were established.

We cannot enumerate all or a large part of the improvements which have come to Boston during the Mayor's administration.

But we CAN say that the public affairs of Boston have received a SPLENDID ADMINISTRATION at the hands of the Mayor.

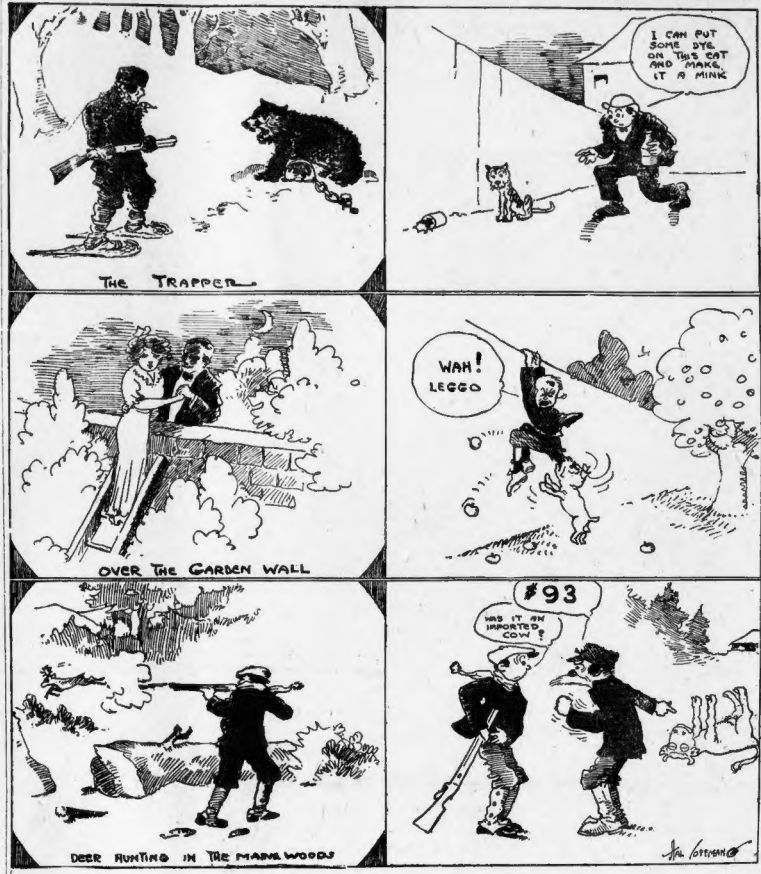

That he has done so much WHILE LOWERING THE TAX RATE is remarkable, but not mysterious.

He KNOWS the ropes. He KNOWS the leaks. He KNOWS the necessity from the fact. He KNOWS municipal values. He is MIDDLEBROW and TIRELESS. His nose is in every department. He has INCREASED efficiency. He has INCREASED the city's income by making the tax-dodgers pay their taxes. He UNEARTHED the attempt of the Shaw trustees to steal half a million in taxes from the city.

Let us have him for ANOTHER TERM. He is an OPPORTUNITY. Boston can get along without him or anybody else, but she can do no better WITH him than with anybody else!

The AMERICAN thinks she can.

Our Atmosphere a Great Mine of Riches

By GARRETT P. SEEVERS

FOR thousands of years men have been content to breathe the air, and think little about it. They were like fish in the water—satisfied, and perhaps grateful, because the transparent medium in which they were plunged kept them alive.

Now, suddenly, science has discovered that the air is a vast mine of untold wealth which only needs to be worked properly in order to furnish us with a great variety of substances that can be utilized in the arts and industries of civilized life.

In the first place, the atmosphere is capable of furnishing enough nitrogen to fertilize all the arable soil of the globe, and to double its capacity of production, without sensibly feeling the loss.

Air Over Small Part of Earth Is Rich in Fertilizing Power

The air resting upon each ten acres of the earth's surface contains as much nitrogen as is possessed by 2,000,000 tons of Chilean nitrate—the amount that Europe has annually imported in recent years, from the diminishing guano deposits of South America, in order to maintain the fertility of its grain fields. But the entire atmosphere covering the globe contains twelve thousand million times as much nitrogen as that which floats over each ten acres of surface—or, in other words, is equivalent in fertilizing power to twenty-four thousand million tons of Chilean nitrate!

This atmospheric nitrogen not only can be, but is being, transformed into artificial fertilizers which are beginning to be substituted on a large scale, for the natural product, which is not sufficient in quantity for the growing needs of the world's increasing population. In Norway, Sweden, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, France and Spain large installations for the transformation of atmospheric nitrogen into fertilizers now exist.

But to serve as a base for fertilizers is only one of the uses to which nitrogen taken direct from the air is put. It is also employed in the fabrication of explosives, of dyes, of photographic materials, of ammonia, of electric lamp filaments, of artificial indigo, of medicine, and in many other directions.

The second great constituent of the air, oxygen, is equally manifold in its uses when separated from the atmosphere. It gives us soda, one of the most important antiseptics known, which is employed, for instance, in purifying the drinking water of great cities, and also in purifying and vitalizing the air in closed places. In art and industry oxygen plays as large a part, that, before man has been inventing artificially obtaining it in large quantities from the air, little advance could be made in some of our modern life.

But there are other things in the great aerial mine over our heads that are like diamonds scattered among beds of gold and silver. It is only within the last twenty years that we have begun to get out of the atmosphere certain, in addition to oxygen, nitrogen, carbonic acid, ammonia, hydrogen, and a few previously unknown gases, which are becoming of increasing importance in the very useful properties.

Helium appears to possess valuable medicinal properties, but, at the present time, none seem to be the use of these rare atmospheric gases which offers the greatest utility. It is employed to produce various kinds of artificial light. When an electric current is passed through a tube filled with pure neon it gives a brilliant red light. If mercury vapor is mixed with it, neon gives the color of the light is blue. If nitrogen and carbonic acid are mixed with the mixture with neon the illumination bursts into a glow resembling sunlight.

Carbonic anhydride alone gives a white light; if nitrogen is mixed with it the color of the light becomes a rose-gold, or pink; if a little ordinary air is let in the hue changes to pure rose. With various mixtures of the elements the desired color of light may be obtained, and a group of illuminated tubes may be made to resemble some of the clusters of many colored stars which astronomers have seen in the sky.

Exploitation of Air's Industrial Riches Has Only Begun

The great reducing machine for the purpose of the atmosphere is the apparatus employed to produce liquid air. With this the oxygen and nitrogen are easily separated, and the carbonic acid, isolation and distillation all the rare gases that are in pure state, from the liquidified air. The extraction of the liquidified air of the air has only just begun, but it has already gone far enough to enable the assertion of a French writer that it will lead to a complete economical revolution.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER V.

JULIA and Caryl Marvin walked along in silence for some blocks after leaving the house in which they had just rented a room. It was late in the afternoon and street lights and electric signs were beginning to combat the gathering gloom.

On the street, the roar of late afternoon traffic made speech impossible. Motor cars threaded their way through the shifting confusion of trucks, busses and trolleys; brightly illuminated windows displayed articles from all corners of the globe; far up the street a pulsating electric sign proclaimed persistently the name of the latest theatrical success. Daintily powdered women passed, accompanied by well-groomed men, and scraps of conversation and an occasional laugh mingled with the clatter of vehicles and the never-ceasing roar of the city. The girls passed through the crowd and at last turned into a dingy side street that seemed dark and quiet after the noise and glitter of the city's greatest thoroughfare. Caryl was the first to break the silence between herself and her sister.

"I think it's all horrid!" she announced suddenly.

"What's the matter now?" demanded Julia. She spoke sharply, for she was hungry and tired, and her feet ached from much walking. She was finding it difficult to find a uniformly sympathetic ear to the younger girl's many complaints.

"This life we are leading!" Caryl replied pettishly. "We are having a stupider time here than we did in our own little town. I am beginning to hate Boston. Sometimes I wish we were back at home."

"Yes, I do!" retorted Caryl, and she whispered over and over to herself. She collided with someone on a heavy box, and she was immersed in her own unhappy thoughts to pause to apologize.

She was half way across the avenue when the sudden blast of an automobile horn and a shrill screech behind her made her gasp with terror. She turned so quickly that the speeding taxicab brushed her skirts and the driver shouted an oath at her—but she did not heed it.

For on the curb she had just left stood Caryl, supported by a tall figure in a gray overcoat. Julia sprang toward them.

"Oh, Caryl!" she cried, "are you hurt?"

The man smiled reassuringly and lifted his hat. "I think she is only badly scared," he said, pleasantly. "I am afraid I was a little sudden and rough, but I had to grab her pretty quickly, or she would have been struck."

"No, Julia," answered Caryl, "I was frightened—that's all. I would have been killed if it hadn't been for this gentleman!" she added, smiling up into her rescuer's face.

"We are more grateful to you than we can ever say," stammered Julia.

The man nodded easily as he released his hold on the younger girl and turned to go.

"Please don't be grateful," he said. "It was only my good luck that you need be thankful for. I'm glad I happened along just in the nick of time."

"But," said Caryl, shyly, "won't you tell us your name? We'd like to—"

The man interrupted her with a boyish laugh and shook his head. "I did a more nothing—good night!" he answered over his shoulder as he swung away down the avenue.

The names of reaction was gripping Julia when she reached the farther curb. She felt dizzy and faint, and her heart sank under the recurring thought of the responsibility resting upon her.

"Caryl, dear," she faltered, "we'll go back home and get work there. We'll go anywhere rather than stay in this awful city."

Caryl looked at her in surprise. Her cheeks were glowing and her eyes bright.

"Go away?" she repeated, "oh, no! I want to stay in Boston. Oh, Julia—wasn't he handsome and—"

GLOBE TROTTERS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I must be nice to travel," said a quiet, little man. "We heard some salesman talking and was asked to join their

One of the salesmen, so it seemed, was bored and travel weary. He knew each town from Birmingham to Hancock on the Erie. He spoke of trips to Callicoon and Jaunts to Middlestown, and said he often figured that he'd like to settle down.

Another salesman, it appeared, kept bobbing like a cork along the O. & W. from Rouses to New York. Another told his brethren that he made few little calls. But often went to Buffalo and saw Niagara Falls. They all agreed with worldly looks that men should stay at home, and hoped the day was coming when they wouldn't have to roam.

"It must be nice to travel," said the quiet, little man. "I've just returned this Summer from a trip to Hindostan. I spent three years in Egypt, was in Asia just last fall, and hunted in South Africa with my old friend, Oom Paul. But these were merely journeys, and I hunger now and then to be a real globe trotter like you jolly traveling man."
